ROBBERS! SEND HELP!
CRY STARTS POLICEMEN
HUSTLING TO 'L' STATION

But All They Catch Is Their
Breaths—Find It Is Hours,
Perhaps Official.

Acting Lieut. Krueger of the 17th Street Police Station took down the clock telephone receiver at 10:40 o'clock to-day. Over the wire came a breathless, tremulous voice calling:

"They're holding up the ticket agent of the elevated station at 11th Avenue and First Street. Two men with revolvers!"

"Who are you?" asked Krueger, already rushing out of his office.

"Help! For God's sake send help!" answered the voice and the connection was cut off.

Krueger's fingers sought the push button. He rushed down the stairs into the room, and at his orders went streaming out of the door.

Krueger called Police Headquarters. He called the 17th Street Police Station. He called the 17th Street Police Station. He called the 17th Street Police Station.

Krueger's first phone reached the station first. It had been doubted by the call of rapping shots on the sidewalk and long blasts of police whistles.

John J. Ryan was quietly counting nickels when the small army rushed up into the station.

"Is everybody crazy?" he asked in answer to a dozen questions. "Nothing has happened here."

Lieut. Stapleton telephoned to the superintendent of the Second Avenue line and learned that nothing of any trouble had been heard from any other station.

The only information the angry policemen were able to learn about the person who gave the alarm was that when he called headquarters he asked to be connected "with the Fifth Avenue Police." Very few men outside the department use that formula in asking for a particular police station.

There is a smouldering suspicion among the victims that a deputy commissioner or perhaps an inspector may have been making a test.

Flatbush Taxpayers Protest Bridge Levy

Delegation Calls on Mayor to Ask Cost of Extension Be Assessed

Generally in Brooklyn.

Claiming many of the local assessments levied by the Board of Estimate for the $2,000,000 Flatbush extension to the Manhattan Bridge are greater than the actual valuations of the property, a big delegation of Brooklyn residents appeared before Mayor Mitchell to-day and asked him to sign a bill which imposes the cost of the extension on the taxpayers of Brooklyn at large.

Under a charter provision, the Board of Estimate some time ago decided to tax the property owners in the immediate vicinity of the Flatbush Avenue extension of the bridge. This was done on the theory that those who receive the most benefit from an improvement should pay the cost.

Mayor Mitchell showed his displeasure over the action of the protestants in going to Albany for relief. The Board of Estimate will take up the Flatbush Avenue extension protests to-morrow.

PLOT TO BURN VANCOUVER?

Police Hold Theory After Two City Bridges Are Set Ablaze.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 29.—Fire, held by some police officers to be part of a plot to burn the city, started simultaneously in the Cambie and Granville Street bridges, connecting the business and residence sections of Vancouver. The loss was $200,000.

Aside from the bridges, however, no attempts at arson were discovered as far as could be learned. Thousands of persons, blocked on their way to work, watched the flames roar from the wood and tar pavement of the great Cambie bridge as here. The frame of the bridge is steel. The flames gradually burned themselves out. The fire at the Granville Street bridge, a mile away, was extinguished with small loss.
